What is the goal of the training?

To build capacity of youth workers and youth leaders with a focus on innovative educational training, where participants will learn about the topics of the projects and the methods of conveying these topics to other young people.

The aims:

- Empowered youth with necessary tools and capacity-building activities.
- Participants receive knowledge and good practices in the field of environment and health.
- Build competencies in advocacy in the field of environment and health topics.
- Additionally, get tools to share between peers in the region through project practical learning activities.

About the project

Youth Network No Excuse Slovenia, in partnership with NGO COE (Montenegro), Proteus Foundation (Hungary), and Engineers for Environmental Protection - Environment Engineering Group (Serbia), are collaborating in the SEE the Change project, within which we are creating a network under this name.

What is the goal of the project?

The project aims to empower youth in environmental health in Southeast Europe and the Balkans, engaging young people, experts, decision-makers, and the public across local, national, and regional levels. Through international youth work, it boosts local initiatives, transfers successful projects for broader social impact, and focuses on youth leaders within youth-led organizations to spread environmental knowledge among peers. Participation in international youth groups encourages engagement in campaigns and policy advocacy.

The project encompasses two interconnected directions: capacity building through innovative educational activities and the establishment of a network as a regional center for education on sustainable development goals, environment, and health.
